Passing Away.
BY CHAS. SWAIN.

Look from the casement—look and tell What's passing, mother dear:
Since dawn I've heard a funeral bell, Saw passing on my way:
And now there comes the solemn fall Of footsteps sweeping high:
Look down the street, I hear their feet, Some funeral's passing by.

The mother gazed with anxious face, But nothing there was seen, Except each old accustomed place,
And what had always been.

A moment yet, dear mother, stay:
Strange sounds are on the air, Like angels singing on their way,
Or voices close in prayer:
Oh! lift my pillow high—more high—For I am faint and low; Help me to look upon the sky,
And bless them ere they go!

The mother raised her daughter's head, But no word could she speak;
She hoped that from her bosom fled, Left tears upon her cheek.

The night looked through the casement old,
A form so wasted, thin, and cold—No light might there prevail;
But that which conquers death yet beams Upon her wasted brow:
And sweet, as though an angel dreamed,
The sufferer rested now!

Oh! who the monster's grief may tell?
Or who may comfort bring?
Yet high above the funeral bell, She heard the angels sing.

Jeremiah Snead's Courtship.
It was one of those gloomy, cheerless nights in the bleak month of December, when it rained pelted on the frozen ground without and a party of merry travellers, of all classes, were gathered around a huge blazing fire of a small tavern in the village of Clove Hill, relating tales of the ocean, hobgoblin stories, &c. One of the company was a small thick set man, with a head of hair more resembling a mammoth mop than anything else as it stuck out in stiff uncouth bunches from his head, and hanging in every imaginable direction except that in which it was intended by nature; twisted around his neck, which was minus a collar, was a red cotton handkerchief, and his total ensemble was uncouth and ludicrous in the extreme. He looked around upon the party with a shy, quizzical expression of countenance, as he was asked to tell a story. "A story, you say, is it?" he said. "Well, here goes!" and after a preparatory "ahem!" he commenced:—
"Well, you must all know that I was once in love. You may laugh, but it is as true as the ring of beer is on the table. I was a young looking chap then I had had his heartstrings played upon by the fair sex, and at last surrendered to their sweet beauteous features to their fiery; and many men often get served in a similar manner myself for their audacity in making love to the little witches, for I tell you, they slip through your hands as easily as an eel; there is no such thing as calling any of them your wifes until the person tells you she is your wife, for better or for worse; and comrades, you often find them a deal worse than you took them for."

"Ha, ha, ha!" rang out from the crowd as he delivered himself of this last remark.
"But how were you treated by your fair Dulcinea?" asked one. "Come, tell of your courtship."

"That is what I am going to do, if you will give me a few minutes," and draining his mug he continued—
"I was once on a visit to the town of Dennissville. While sojourning there I was invited to a party, and after no little trouble, my toilet was at last completed, and I started for the scene of merriment. I arrived after the dancing had commenced, but I soon had a partner, and was tripping away on the light fantastic toe to the strains of 'The girl I left behind me.' But bless your soul, for my thoughts were all engrossed with the girl I had with me. Indeed, she was a little gipsy, just the kind of one who is going to steal your heart if she can get a chance. I can see her now, as she tripped lightly across the room, in her white dress and blue bodice, her hair pouring like gold for all the world as if they were just ready for a kiss; and I tell you it was hard work not to take them at their looks, and im-pudgently upon them a dozen kisses, but I did not. You needn't pucker up your mouths, as you would like to have tasted the nectar of those lips. No, no, I had too much sense for that, as I knew very well she would not have allowed such a thing, for she was a ready wit. Well, I danced with her every now and then, and returned home without a heart; she had stolen mine, and the worst of it was,
I was not sure that I had her in return, although she did give me some silly looks when the old folks were not watching us too nearly. So things went on, and I had not hinted a dozen times that I loved her, but she never admitted she understood all my signs and love glances and would look at me as much as to say, 'What do you mean?' but I could not muster courage sufficient to tell her what I meant. One day I wrote her a little billet doux on sweetly perfumed paper, couched de rose, informing her that I was coming in the afternoon, to see her on business of importance, and wished to see her alone.

At the appointed time, true to my word, I presented myself at the door of her dwelling. It was opened by an odd specimen of the children of Africa, who grinned at me as she replied that her mistress was at home.
"What did you laughing at you rascal said I?" said I, laughing at her putting her apron in her mouth to prevent herself from laughing out. "You have not a grain of sense." "Oh, I ain't laffin' at nuffin' much, only I'm so funny I can't help it. Ha! ha!
I'm giggled right out."

I paid no further heed to her, but entered the parlor, where I sat turning in my mind how I should begin the subject nearest my heart. In a few moments the young lady entered, looking prettier than usual, and I endeavored to converse on the weather, the crops, and heaven only knows what besides; but still nothing would do, and I made up my mind to come right out with it, and confess to her my love, and ask her to become Mrs.
Jeremiah Snead; but somehow or other the words would not come out, but stuck in my throat. I knew she was expecting me to say something, by the manner in which she looked at me, as much as to ask me what I came for. I took her hand in mine, and was about to impart all my love to her, when the little rogue jumped up, saying she would go and summon lights to be brought in, as it was growing so dark; and letting the window-curtain fall, she hurried from the apartment, soon returning and occupying her former seat.

I continued to pour into her ear the greatest quantity of love you can imagine, calling her my angel, my heart's idol, and all such stuff, which I really meant; for I was desperately in love with the maiden. She did not reply, and I taking it for granted she made up her mind to leave father and mother, and become my loving wife, Mrs. Jeremiah Snead. I seized her in my arms, and kissed the tears from her lovely cheeks, when the door opened, and the candles appeared. Oh! horrors! instead of courting the mistress, I had been making love to the maid. There was the same plaguesy black face grinning at me which encountered me at the door, and the mistress the subject of my effusions, was sitting at the other end of the room, laughing aloud to hysterics! The little black-amoeba held me firmly round the neck and with a broad grin overread-ing her countenance, she shouted out, "Call me your lovely angel again!"

The company here burst into a prolonged laugh, which made the walls of the old room ring again. When silence was restored, Jeremiah continued his narrative.

"Oh, massa!" said the black girl, "you did make lub me night party! I wish you would tub to me day some more. I likes it very much. You press my hand so hard that you liked to broke it in two, and you hab bit my lip, kissing it so hard. Lot us make lub agin, you does it so funny!"

You can well imagine, friends, I heaped no very envious epithets upon them; for I knew the use of my expense was all concocted before my arrival, and I was angry enough to kill them both, at the ridiculous position I was placed in. The young lady had not spoken, for my rage only served to add fuel to her merriment. I requested an explanation, and the saucy creature replied, with the greatest coolness imaginable—"You ought to have better sense than to make love in the dark; and as you appeared so well contented with the maid, I thought I would not interrupt your tale-a-tale."

I knew she was fabricating a story, but what could I do but receive it? I did not remin to parody many words with her, and with a very pugnacious "Good evening," I seized my hat and dashed from the house, as her gay, half tantalizing laugh rang in my ears. That night I left Dennissville, and have never returned there since; nor have I ever courted another girl, white or black, in daylight or darkness.

After a hearty laugh at the good-natured manner in which he narrated the story, one of the party proposed drinking the health of Mrs. Jeremiah Snead. It was really complicated with, when the next in turn was applied to for a story, and thus the evening wore away amidst jokes and laughter—BALASCA.

Adventure with a Lion.
One day, when eating my humble dinner, I was interrupted by the arrival of several of the natives, who, in breathless haste, related that an ongema, or lion, had just killed one of their goats close to the mission station (Richardsfeldt), and begged me to lend a hand in destroying the beast. They had so often cried "wolf," that I did not give much heed to their statements; but as they persisted in their story, I at last determined to ascertain its truth. Having strapped to my waist a shooting-belt, containing the several requisites of a hunter—such as bullets, caps, knife, etc., I shouldered my trusty double-barrelled gun (after loading it with steel pointed balls), and followed the men.

In a short time we reached the spot where the lion was believed to have taken refuge.
This was in a dense tamarisk brake, of some considerable extent situated partially on, and below, the sloping banks of the Swacop, near to its junction with the Ongetema, one of its tributaries.

On the rising ground above the brake in question, were drawn up in battle array, a number of Damaras and Namaquas, some armed with assegais, and a few with guns.
Others of the party were in the brake itself, endeavoring to oust the lion.

But as it seemed to me that the "beaters" were timid, and moreover slow in their movements, I called them back; and, accompanied by only one or two persons, as also a few worthless dogs, entered the brake myself. It was rather a dangerous proceeding; for, in places, the cover was so thick and tangled as to oblige me to creep on my hands and knees, and the lion, in consequence, might have easily pounced upon me without a moment's warning. At that time, however, I had not obtained any experimental knowledge of the old saying, "A burnt child dreads the fire," and therefore felt little or no apprehension.

Thus I had proceeded for some time, when suddenly, and within a few paces of where I stood, I heard a low, angry growl, which caused the dogs, with hair erect in the manner of hogs' bristles, and with their tails between their legs, to sink behind my heels.
Immediately afterward, a tremendous shout of "Ongema! Ongema!" was raised by the natives on the bank above, followed by a discharge of fire-arms. Presently, however, all was still again; for the lion, as I subsequently learnt, after showing himself on the outskirts of the brake, had retreated into it.

Once more I attempted to dislodge the beast; but, finding the enemy awaiting him in the more open country, he was very loth to leave his stronghold. Again, however, I succeeded in driving him to the edge of the brake, where, as in the first instance, he was received with a tremendous volley; but a broomstick would have been equally efficacious as a gun in the hands of these people; for, out of a great number of shots that were fired, not one seemed to have taken effect.

Worn out at length by my exertions, and disgusted beyond measure at the way in which the natives bungled the affair, I left the tamarisk brake, and, rejoining them on the bank above, offered to change place with them; but my proposal, as I expected, was forthwith declined.

As the day, however, was now fast drawing to a close, I determined to make one other attempt to destroy the lion, and should that prove unsuccessful, to give up the chase.
Accordingly, accompanied by a single native, I again entered the brake in question, which I examined for some time without seeing anything; but on arriving at that part of the cover we had first searched, and when in a spot comparatively free from bushes, I suddenly sprang the beast within a few paces of me. It was a black-maned lion, and one of the largest I ever remember to have encountered in Africa. But his movements were so rapid, so silent and smooth, withal, that it was not until he had entered the thick cover, (at which he might have been about thirty paces distant) that I could fire. On receiving the ball, he wheeled short about, and, with a terrible roar, bounded toward me.
When within a few paces, he crouched if so to spring, having his head embedded in the bark of a tree.

Drawing a large hunting knife, and slipping on one knee, and, thus prepared, awaiting his onset. It was an awful moment of suspense, and my situation was critical in the extreme. Still my presence of mind never for a moment forsook me—indeed, I felt that nothing but the most perfect coolness and absolute self-command would be of any avail.

I would now have become the assailant; but as—owing to the intervening bushes, and clouds of dust raised by the lion's tail against the ground—I was unable to see his head, while to aim at any other part would have been madness, I refrained from firing.
While intently watching his every motion, he suddenly bounded toward me; but, when it was owing to his not perceiving me, per-tainingly concealed as I was in the long grass, or to my instinctively throwing my body on one side, or to his miscalculating his distance, in making his last spring, he went clear over me, alighting on the ground three or four paces beyond. Instantly, and without rising, I wheeled round on my knee, and discharged my second barrel; and, as his broadside was then toward me, lodged a ball in his shoulder, which it completely smashed.
On receiving my second fire, he made another and more determined rush at me, but, owing to his disabled state, I happily avoided him. It was, however, only by a hair's breadth, for he passed me within arms' length. He afterwards scrambled into a thick cover beyond, where, as night was then approaching, I did not deem it prudent to pursue him.

At an early hour on the next morning, however, we followed his "spoor," and soon came to the spot where he passed the night.
He breathed his last very near to where we were "at fault," but in prosecuting the search, we had unfortunately taken the opposite direction.—Lake Ngami.

County Council of York and Peel.
Thursday, 28th.

The Council met yesterday.
The Warden read a communication from Mr. Armstrong, superintendent of schools in Vaughan, resigning his office.

Mr. James presented a petition from the municipality of York, praying for a separation of the city of Toronto from the United Counties of York and Peel, for judicial purposes.

Mr. Tyrrell presented a petition from Mr.
G. P. Dixon, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, praying for aid to the Grammar School at Richmond Hill.

COUNTY ATTORNEYS.
Mr. Tyrrell rose to move the following resolution, of which he had given notice, and upon which the Council resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole.

"That in consequence of the intimate connection that must necessarily exist in business matters between the local authorities in the several counties and the County Attorney, it is exceedingly desirable that the gentleman filling that office, should be a person who takes an interest in local matters, of easy access, and favorably thought of in the county, and who can be relied on for the faithful performance of the duties incumbent on him. It is therefore desirable that this Council shall appoint a committee to draft a petition to the Governor General, submitting to him the names of the following gentlemen Messrs.

He said that he thought it very desirable that the gentleman filling that office should be of easy access, and one in whom they could place confidence. He did not wish to step beyond the bounds of duty, and attempt to dictate to the Governor or his Council who they should appoint, but at the same time the Government might be very desirous of knowing their opinions upon the matter; it might relieve them, at any rate it could do no harm for the Council to give their opinion as to who was most likely to be generally well received throughout the county. That was his reason for mentioning the matter, not because he had any individual in his eye, whom he wished to be appointed to the office. Since he had been a magistrate he had often had great difficulty in obtaining an audience with the Crown Solicitor, and it was almost impossible to do justice to parties; he might wait from day to day and the Crown Officer, who had plenty of private business to attend to, seemed to think very little of the matter.
Every one who knew the way in which business had been conducted heretofore, would see that it was nothing but their duty to give their opinions as to who would manage it properly.
He found, also, that the County Attorney was to be consulted by the magistrates throughout the county, and almost all the local authorities could go to him for advice upon local matters, and he thought that was another reason why a gentleman should be selected in whom they could place implicit confidence.

Having read the resolution, Mr. Tyrrell continued:—It was for the committee to decide upon the names. He intended to fill up the blank with the names of Mr. Bacon for one, and Mr. M. C. Cameron for another.
He did not know whether either of these gentlemen would accept of the office. He thought Mr. Bacon would be well received in every part of the county.

The Warden said that though they had a right to recommend certain names for the consideration of the Government, still he did not agree in the propriety of the proposition made by Mr. Tyrrell; for many reasons. He would mention some. In the first place, it was a new office which had been created by Act of Parliament, and no officer had been appointed under that Act yet. They (the Council) had not asked for the creation of such an office; it was one which would very materially enlarge the county expenditure, and as long as the Government hesitated about filling up the appointments, the Council had better let the matter rest. If they began to contend the claims of gentlemen, it would show a sort of anxiety to see the Act carried out, or, as all the funds would have to be paid directly, not indirectly, by the county, it might be taken as an indication that they desired to get rid of the money. Such appointments were always looked upon as political—municipal bodies were not known in law as political bodies—and he was certain that the Government would be no more guided by what was said there, than by the wind which blows across the lake. He felt satisfied that their best course was to let it alone.

Mr. Tyrrell was sorry to disagree with the Warden. He (Mr. H.) had said that the office was a new one, and that was one reason why they should not select men for it.
He (Mr. T.) thought just the contrary.

The Warden said Mr. Tyrrell had misunderstood him. What he (Mr. Hartman) insisted was, that the office had been created contrary to the wishes of the people; no one ever asked for it, consequently he did not think it well to give advice as to who should fill it, when there was no necessity for it being filled.

Mr. Tyrrell proceeded to make some further remarks, but as the Council seemed inclined to follow the advice given by Mr.
Hartman, it was moved by Mr. Phillips that the Committee do rise, which was agreed to, with only three dissentients.

The New Era.

Newmarket, Friday February 5, 1858.

General Summary.

In consequence of the severe illness of Mr. Jackson and the close proximity of his room to the Printing Office, his Medical Adviser has deemed it expedient that the Era should be discontinued for two weeks, as his case is considered doubtful. As the newspaper accounts are kept by volumes and numbers, subscribers will receive their full number after the close of two weeks the Era will be again issued; meanwhile Job work will be continued.

The English Lecture for the season will be delivered this (Friday) evening, before the Mechanics' Institute, in the Union Sabbath School Room, by Thomas Hodgkin, Esq., L. L. B., Solicitor, "Materials of Early History." Chair to be taken at 7 1/2 o'clock.

Seat of Government.

Her Majesty, through the advice of her Council, has recommended Ottawa, as the Canadian Seat of Government. It is said that this city got the preference as a place so remote from civilization, that an enemy, in time of war, could never find it; but we believe that the selection was made in accordance with the wishes of the Canadian Ministry. If, however, the advice was given Her Majesty on military grounds, why not advise the removal of the Imperial Parliament of London to a mountain fastness of Scotland or Wales; lest some Paul Jones should again visit the Island? Such a proposition would be quite as reasonable as to recommend the removal of the Canadian Seat of Government into an inaccessible wilderness, and the supplies would be voted just as quick to carry out the one project, as the other. We are all as able to defend our soil from an invasion, as the English are theirs; and Her Majesty must undertake our progress, if she thinks a hostile Yankee dare even again show his head in the Province.

EDUCATION.

"Education formed the common mind, Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."
If the aversion of the past be true, and no one, we presume, will doubt it, the subject is the most sublime and important that can engage the human mind.

Education is the only distinguishing characteristic between civilized man and the savage—between the polished, humanized Anglo-Saxon, and the benighted, brutal Sepoy—between the benign radiance of Christian philanthropy and the ferocious, blood-thirsty character of the Cannibal. In short, it distinguishes man from the brute, as without the cultivation of the faculties of the soul, the superiority of man over the lower order of animals, would not be apparent. Knowledge is an emanation of Omnipotence, and consequently, as illimitable as the universe, and as inexhaustible as its source; and, as the human intellect rises in the scale of science, it approximates the Divine original, without, however, any possibility of ever arriving at perfection. The fountain of knowledge possesses an irresistible charm, which when once tasted, the thirst, like that of Thirst, increases with each succeeding draught till it becomes insatiable. The Pictorian Springs, during ages past, has been almost wholly inaccessible, to the common masses of mankind, but the axis of Liberty has touched the fount, and the pure waters are gushing forth, and spreading over all the earth, as free to the peasant as the prince. While the illusions that the acquisitions of knowledge, is an irksome drudgery, is fast disappearing under an improved system of teaching.

Improvements of the mind, when properly directed, is the chief pleasure in every period of life, but youth is, unquestionably, the time to lay the foundation for future eminence in science, to form habits and character indelible, to form an honored citizenship in the republic of letters. It is true, that many have passed through the halls of Science, to the Temple of Fame, at an advanced period, but this only shows the road is always open to the ascendant. While youth is gliding up the dizzy heights with ease, and plucking every flower with imperceptible delight, manhood can only exceed by unremitting toil. It must be admitted that injudicious, not to mention trifling, often renders the path of learning, difficult, dreary, and unpleasant. Schools should be made the paradise of youth, and the nursery its alma mater; the groves, the walks, the play-grounds, and the play-grounds, should improve the tender mind with the beautiful and the picturesque, while the kind, disarming attention of the teacher, should render school the most delightful spot on earth; a place, to which in later life, the mind can revert with tender emotion.

Parents and teachers should remember, that children first learn by imitation, and when honor is a pandemonium of domestic evils, and school a bazaar garden, where age brutality rules the young, and an aversion time can never wholly efface.

Tyranny and coercion breed treason, and contempt, while love in the ruler, begets a corresponding passion in the governed, thus while the despots, bristling with bayonets, are convulsed to their very centres, our own Gracious Sovereign, with her mild sceptre of parental love, reigned successfully in the affections of her subjects, beloved, and venerated by all, but feared by none. Fear never did, and never will inspire true obedience.

With the death penalty abolished, in the State of Rhode Island, not a single murder has been committed, during the past year, while New York, with the scaffold in New York, with the scaffold in view, had been the theatre of the most bloody tragedies. Precisely the same laws of mind, which govern successfully the adults, should be applied to the child; for "Men are but children of maturer growth." He who has charge of the young, should look into his own breast, and try to discover what would be congenial to his own feelings, were the position of teacher, and pupil reversed. The very definition of the term points out the way. Education signifies, to lead out, and it requires the gentle hand of kindness to lead out the tender thought, and "teach the young idea how to shoot." Should the rod ever become indispensable, (which we very much doubt,) the little offender, should first be made sensible of the nature of the crime, and his feelings touched by that still, small voice of reason, which always softens and subdues.

This is most emphatically, the age of general diffusion of learning, and the Anglo-Saxon race, especially the American branch, belongs the immortal honor of taking the lead in the noble enterprise of elevating and refining the masses, by placing education within the reach of all. Our own National School system is not surpassed, and the rising generation in Canada, will be as grateful for learning and intelligence, as their forefathers for loyalty and bravery.

The subject of Education is the all-absorbing topic of the day; no family of standing, and means, would think of removing to a village or town, not possessing the advantages of efficient Superior and Common Schools, Libraries, and Mechanics' Institute; no inducement of trade or business, however great, could overcome the objection. Newmarket possesses every advantage, as to position, salubrity, and Literary Institutions, that could possibly be desired, and the constant accession of wealth and intelligence, is most flattering. While we congratulate our citizens, on the success of their labors, in establishing a seat of learning, we must remind them, that the thing has yet been done to ornament and beautify the exterior; nothing towards planting Groves, and preparing Grounds worthy of our pretensions. Our Grammar School stands like a lonely sentinel in the midst of desolation, without a single tree or shrub, to intercept Sol's scorching rays, or to woo the gentle Muses. The Classics are so associated with the groves of Academe, that we can scarcely think of an abode of Learning, without the leafy canopy under which Plato shadowed forth the immortality of the soul. Let us hope that next summer may see exotic bloom, and evergreen flourish in all the freshness of pristine beauty.

Newmarket must look well after its laurels—powerful rivals are springing up all round—every village making any pretensions towards enlightenment, is putting forth all its strength to secure the advantages of Institutions of Learning. Markham village, one of the most enterprising little places in Canada West, has entered the lists, and is now competing for Classical honors; the only wonder is that a people possessing so much wealth, and energy, should be so late in the field—a bright future awaits them.

The people of Vaughan have remodeled the County Council, setting forth the neglect of duty of their local Superintendent. Is this the only township that feels that the office of Superintendent has been a sinecure? For all practical purposes, the very Classical announcement might be placed on the door of many of this department of instruction. The Superintendent at home, where he may be consulted at all hours, except when absent on professional business. Of course when absent on other than professional business, he would still be at home, when he might be consulted by the Schools.

Our own impression is that the office of local Superintendent might be abolished without any detriment to the interests of education; at least no one but a practical teacher, of great decision of character, and untiring perseverance could be of any real service. While the teacher has to submit to an examination and obtain a certificate of qualification, why not impart knowledge he does not possess.

Our country is placed, side by side, with the most powerful and enlightened Republic, that ever existed, and to us is entrusted the maintenance of the honor of monarchical institutions; and the prestige of the British name; so far the trust has not suffered in our hands. At the World's Fair, we entered the lists with the proudest nations of the Earth, and in many respects, bore off the palm from all; and while the Monetary Institutions of every other land, have collapsed from the pressure of the crisis, ours alone, have withstood the shock.

Statesmen, and Philanthropists, view with admiration the contest of principles, and point with delight, to the goddess of Liberty, seated on her infant Temple of Science, and waving her magic wand over all, without distinction of creed, or color: While the "African Eagle," stripped of its golden plumage, is hovering around her, to pluck, if possible, the secret of our success, and bear it away to the land of Pilgrimage.

Liberal Plagiarism.

The Observer of Prince Albert, with the propriety of Jupiter, has cast down from the constellation Ontario, the twinkling "Star" Yindicator, simply for daring to call in question the propriety of shining by reflected light.

The Vindicator avers that the Observer pirated from the Daily Globe an editorial verbatim, and that the Globe was "so struck with the brilliancy of the production, that it did not recognize its own offspring, but under the heading of 'The opinions of the press,' sent it out once more, in its weekly mission of converting the benighted ministrants of Canada. From our intimate acquaintance with the proprietor of the Observer, we are confident he was not privy to the plagiarism in question. We have always found him honorable and enterprising, and his patrons may be assured, that if he had been unfortunate in his first selections, he will not allow the paper to become contemptible through editorial incompetency. The appearance of the Observer, on the eve of a general election, was most auspicious, and it rendered good service to the liberal cause. While we wish the proprietor every success in his undertaking, we must say, that the rejoinder, under the unintelligible caption of 'The falling Star of Ontario,' was uncalled for, and not calculated to increase the literary reputation of the journal.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the New Era.
Dear Sir, A letter in your last issue, from Mr. Edward Reynolds, reminding me of an error in the proceedings of the Whitechurch Council, at their last sitting, furnished by myself, at your request. And, in justice to Mr. Reynolds and all concerned, should be corrected. And I most cheerfully embrace the excellent opportunity of doing so.

It was not designedly in my part, but an omission, and of which I should have been while I ought to have said (instead of applying for the office). Mr. Reynolds was willing or had consented, it appeared to me, as it was necessary to have his consent from having served in the same office last year, and could not be compelled to serve. And for privilege's sake, not taking into account the difference between an application for office, and a formal consent, I inserted under the heading of applications. Hoping, Mr. Editor, that Mr. Reynolds, will accept this as a sufficient apology.

I remain, dear Sir,
Yours, respectfully,
J. W. COLLINS.
Whitechurch, Feb'y 2nd, 1858.

Our Board School Trustees.
Sir—You are no doubt, aware that on the second Wednesday in January, the Protestant inhabitants of this village, elected six fit and proper persons to fill the office of School Trustees.

A body elected by the popular voice, one would naturally suppose ought not to be afraid to have the public listen to their deliberations; not so, however, with our Board like the Inquisition of old, they must sit with closed doors. An advertisement had been put in the papers by order of the Board that they would receive applications in "propria persona" as well as by letter in answer to which several applicants made their appearance before this august body, as, however, a day was appointed for the final decision, no answer could be given to the applicants until then. The inhabitants were not kept in ignorance of these facts, and at the appointed time the Board met—Mr. J. B. Caldwell in the chair. The applications were read by the Secretary, several of our most respectable citizens were in the room when the information was given by the Chairman that their absence would be preferable to their presence. Of course, Sir, on a hint of this nature, our Citizens not being poked upon the full powers vested in the arbiters of the educational destinies of our children and, no doubt, fearing that if prompt obedience were not rendered to his highness the "Chairman of the Board of Common School Trustees for the Village of Newmarket," the probability would be that the "father of the Black Rod" would be at once called into requisition, and the fathers of some of our children, actually sneaked out of the room like whipped school boys. As the Board met, and the day was appointed for the final decision, the public has not been made acquainted with the greater part of their proceedings; which, with your leave, Sir, so far as I understand them, I will lay before your readers. After the "clearing of the house," one of the members moved that all the applications be reduced to three, those of Messrs. Alexander, Leach, and Moore, on the ground that a motion was then offered that Mr. Alexander's name be withdrawn, when the vote stood two for withdrawal, and three against. The Chairman declared the motion lost, a motion was then offered to drop the name of Mr. Leach, which of division was pronounced carried. The vote was then taken, at this stage the proceedings only two names remained, those of Mr. Alexander and Mr. Moore. A motion was then offered that Mr. Moore be dropped, when the vote stood two for, three against. The Chairman pronounced the motion lost. You will now, Sir, observe that only one name was before the Board, and notwithstanding that, Mr. Alexander laid before the Board the best possible testimonials, some of which consisted of certificates from the Head Master of the National School, the Head Master of the Model School, the Mayor and Corporation of the town of Milton, a first Class Diploma from Dr. Hays, &c., &c. Notwithstanding that, on a motion that Mr. Alexander be dropped, and that the vote stood Three for, two against. ## CATHARTIC PELS.

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood, and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the morbid elements from the organs of the body, and, by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first cause of dangerous diseases. Any certifying trial their virtues of Professors, Physicians, and Patients, has shown cures of dangerous diseases almost beyond belief; were they not so, the numerous testimonials, and the high character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased, to furnish to all who so inquire.

Annexed we give DIRECTIONS for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

Give one or two PELS three or four times a day, or such quantity as gently move the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure is to be directed to the removal of this cause. If the patient is well while under a cative habit of body. Hence it is to be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

FOURTHLY, the use of purgatives, as the cause of the disorder, and a very unbecomingly, take mild doses of one to four to stimulate the stomach and clear out the intestines. They will not cure it, and the patient will be obliged to take more purgatives, and the disorder disappears. When it is gone, don't forget what caused it.

FIFTHLY, A FOOT, STOMACH, or Morbid Inclination of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and then take one or two Pills daily, until activity and strength are restored to the system.

SIXTHLY, FOR NERVOUSNESS, SICK HEADACHE, NERVOUS PAIN in the Stomach, Back, or Side, take from four to eight Pills at first, and then take one or two Pills daily, until the pain, take more the next day until they do. These complaints will be swept out from the system. Don't wear out the system, and they will be cured. Four stomachs to four.

For SCORFURA, ERYTHRIANAE, and all diseases of the skin, the eruptions will generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many dreadful ulcers and sores have been healed up by purging and purifying effects of the Trilb. and the discharge of the blood, so to saturate the whole system, has completely yielded to their influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health. It cures the eruptions of the face, and the eruptions of the hands, spreads yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all of the unnumbered diseases of the skin, because your system wants cleansing.

To PURIFY THE BLOOD, here are the best medicines to use. They should be taken for the freckles and other eruptions, and the eruptions which low the venereal diseases will be about cured by the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good as the most powerful of the venereal cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections, are cured by the Trilb. and the eruptions of the face, and the eruptions of the hands, spreads yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all of the unnumbered diseases of the skin, because your system wants cleansing.
